

How do you know which electoral system is best for Ontario?
First, you can identify what principles matter most to you...

Legitimacy

The system inspires confidence in both its process and its results.

Fairness of representation

The legislature reflects the make-up of Ontario; parties hold seats in proportion to the votes they received; and each vote carries equal weight.

Voter choice

Voters have both quantity and quality of choice on the ballot.

Effective parties

The system supports strong parties with different policies.

Stable and effective government

The system produces strong, stable governments.

Effective parliament

The legislature works well and has an effective opposition to keep the government in check.

Stronger voter participation

The system helps encourage more people to vote.

Accountability

Voters can identify decision-makers and hold them to account.

Simplicity and practicality

The system is practical and voters can understand how it works.

The Citizens' Assembly wants to hear what you think

We're holding consultation meetings from mid-November 2006 to late January 2007:

- Attend a meeting and participate in the discussion
- Register online or by phone to make a presentation

We're inviting written comments until January 15, 2007:

- Submit your comments online
- Write to us by mail or fax

Visit our website for details on how to participate and to download the consultation guide, Citizens Talking to Citizens.

www.citizensassembly.gov.on.ca

Or pick up the guide at a ServiceOntario/ Government Information Centre near you (www.serviceontario.ca for locations).

Citizens' Assembly Secretariat
1075 Bay Street, Suite 830
Toronto, Ontario M5S 2B1

E-mail: info@citizensassembly.gov.on.ca

Fax: 416-325-8390

Tel.: 416-325-0758

Toll free: 1-866-317-3208

TTY: 416-325-6440 or 1-866-733-9751

1792

That's the year we elected our first parliament.

Some people say Ontario's electoral system has stood the test of time.

Other people say it's time for a change.

What do you think?

The Ontario Citizens' Assembly on Electoral Reform wants to know.

Our electoral system matters

It determines what choices we have at election time and how our votes are counted and translated into seats for members of provincial parliament (MPPs). The system affects who is elected to represent us and which parties form the government and opposition.

Ontario Citizens' Assembly

The Citizens' Assembly was established by a regulation under Ontario's Election Act to assess our electoral system and others and to recommend whether Ontario should keep its current system or adopt a new one. The Citizens' Assembly is independent of government. It's made up of 104 Ontarians—103 randomly selected citizens—one from each electoral district—plus the Chair, George Thomson.

Possible referendum

If the Citizens' Assembly recommends a new system, the government will hold a referendum before or as part of the next election on October 4, 2007.

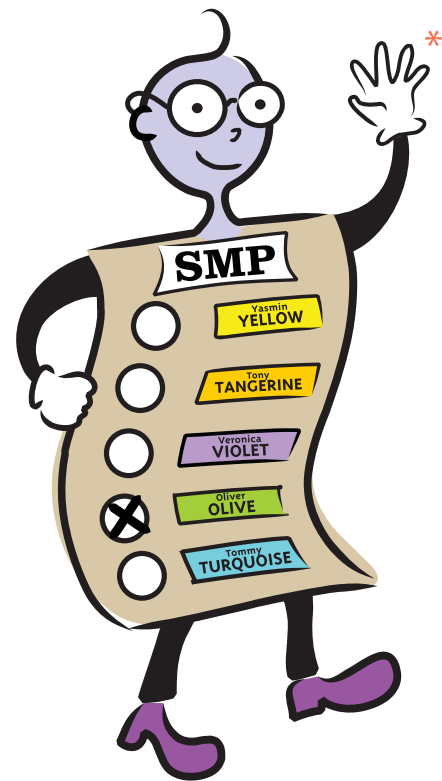

most important to you?
you think are important?

Which of these principles are
Are there other principles

Legitimacy Accountability Simplicity and Practicality Voter Choice Effective Parties
 Fairness of Representation Effective Parliament Stable and Effective Government Stronger Voter Participation

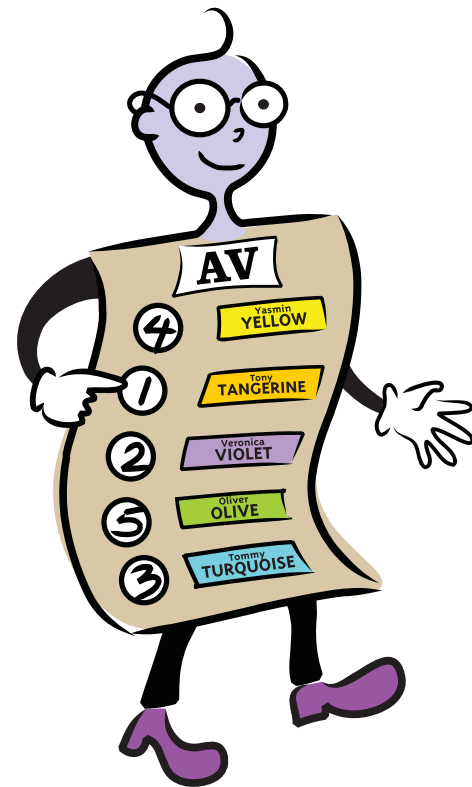

Then you can think about which electoral system is most likely to reflect these principles. Many electoral systems are used around the world. Each works in a different way and produces different results.

A few examples of electoral systems

The system in Ontario is called Single Member Plurality or First Past the Post. Candidates need the most votes to win. They don't need a majority. The system often produces single-party majority government. This is one of the things supporters like about it.

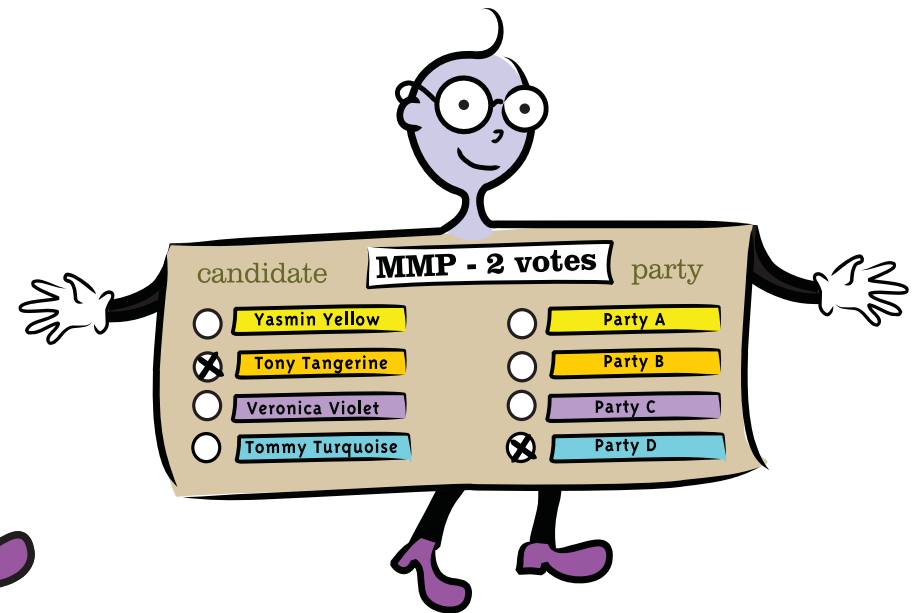

* This is Billy Ballot from the Citizens' Assembly animation "Electoral Systems Around the World." Visit our website to see Billy in action.

In Majority systems, like Alternative Vote in Australia, voters rank all candidates in order of preference. A candidate must get a majority (50% plus 1) of votes to win. That's one of the reasons supporters like it.

In Proportional Representation systems, like the one in South Africa, voters usually choose a party. The proportion or share of seats a party wins is roughly equal to the proportion of votes it gets. This is one of the features supporters like about the system.

In the Mixed Member Proportional system, like the one in Germany, voters cast two votes on a single ballot, one for a party and one for a local candidate. This combination of local and proportional representation is one of the reasons supporters like it.

Visit the Citizens' Assembly website, www.citizensassembly.gov.on.ca, for more information on principles and electoral systems.